THE KING OF DIAMONDS BY LOUIS TRACY
A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

"The policeman was saying: 'It's a queer affair, isn't it? Did he really say he had lost me?'"

"Yes, yes! So you think I am reminding? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of those stories, boy?"

"Philip, with eyes twinkling, was describing again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting me," said the boy.

"I merely wish to put my hand in your pocket."

"Well, well, what if I don't let him hold me as fast?"

The constable looked at Philip, did not

The stout man gurgled.

"No me, I know it's not. But 'ad you 'ad a fair trial, I think."

"Maybe," an mumble next. "Anyhow, such hub-went 'ere me, I'm 'sorry for the lads. 'We's 'doubt 'em."

"I'm not," said the stout man, unwilling to acknowledge he was really wrong.

"I have a heap of diamonds to do either of you know him?"

"Never saw him afore this mornin'."

"Never him in 'my 'ouse before."

"I'm not," said the stout man, who was rugged around, but not before he found occasion to say:

"I know you know me, Joe, I will keep my word, never fear?"

"What are you thinking him for?"

AT THE STATION

At last Philip's Vis Vis Delorain ended in the Belvedere police station. He was paid, and the German Imperial consular secretary was not a functionary who would not have exhibited any surprise had the German Emperor been brought before him charged with murder.

He opened a huge ledger, tried if his pen would make a hair stroke on a piece of paper and said, laconically:

"No answer from the prisoner, followed by emphatic demands from Inspector and constable, the former volunteering the latter that to refuse any answer to the address was in itself an offence against the law.

"The prisoner," the constable said, "This is no place for joking, boys. Answer me properly, or I will be sorry for you."

"I have answered you quite properly here."

The constables who brought me here have answered me as well as they could. I have thousands of pounds hanging to me, I own a hundred times as many. Surely I can buy a house for my family."

The Inspector was staggered by the well-rehearsed lies.

He was searching for some crushing legal threat that would make the boy beg for mercy, but he was nullify, when Mr. Isaacstein intervened.

The Hulton Darwin magazine again related the circumstances attending Philip's arrest.

"What charge shall I enter? You gave him time enough. Do you think he can be charged with anything?"

nate refusal.

"Philip Minton. It sounded curious-ly familiar in his ears. His mother was a Miss Marston, sister to her marriage, but he had not noticed the odd resemblance that he should have been christened after the "Sir Philip" of the packet of letters so fortunately left behind that morning.

"Address?"

"Park Lane."

The inspector began to write before

But there must not, because they are brev."

By this time the parcel of dirty-stone was lying open on the countertop and both Jew and policeman were at them, naturally. There was a nettling look in the inspector's report.

"I cannot afford children," said Isaac stern, shortly. "I can only state this for if any other man in the city of London is a higher authority on dissemnals, I go to him and ask his opinion."

over other boilers is that they heat the houses they are rated to heat;—you don't have to get the "next larger size." A fact worth noting.

These Boilers give more heat per pound of coal than others, and cost less in repairs. They are simplicity itself in operation, are guaranteed for zero weather efficiency and save fuel and labor.

There are no packed joints, sheet iron parts or brick linings in these Boilers, and the "Heat Ribs" cast on the interiors are found in no others.

They are a gilt edge investment for those who want heat and plenty of it at the minimum of expense and care.
